Les Vigeres has been evolving steadily to become a campsite favoured by everyone who is looking for a quiet environment, with all the necessary facilities, but without the blatant commercialisation favoured by many other holiday sites. A simple, traditional campsite rather than a holiday complex. A friendly welcome and helpful advice is given to all upon arriving here

An extensive library of books and magazines is available on a lend/swap basis for anyone whose holiday goal is to lounge around and read. There are books in several languages even, if you are keen enough to try them! The games room is simply equipped, with table tennis the most popular pastime, particularly after a day in the sun or visiting the sites, just the thing to round the day off.

The pool is illuminated at night for a late evening swim under a starry sky, what bliss! There are a number of chairs and sunbeds around the pool to relax, sunbathe or just watch the enjoyment. In fact, the pool is situated with views over the surrounding countryside and woodland, an idyllic setting, what more could you ask for! A wonderful way to pass the time under the summer sun.

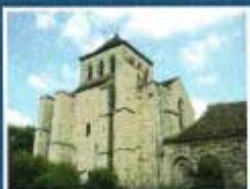

A site laid out to cope with most demands but with just 45 generous emplacements there is plenty of room to spread out - each pitch separated by hedges and trees giving privacy and much needed shade in summer months.

The swimming easy steps into a shallow section, around 90cm deep, where children and adults can play very happily and a gently sloping deeper section, around 2mtrs 40 deep, for pool is divided into two areas with those who want to swim.

A large selection of brochures is available on the varied sites around the region should you wish to see more of the beautiful countryside, villages and attractions of this wonderful part of France, steeped in the history of Richard the Lionheart and the 100 years war.
